

JAPS READY TO PROTECT THE ALLIES

WILL INVADE SIBERIA IF SATISFACTORY ARRANGEMENTS CAN BE MADE WITH REGARD TO FUTURE.

AWAITING THE WORD

Chinese Troops May Be Utilized to Act in Accord With the Japanese It Is Reported Today.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)

Japan, the reports indicate, will act soon to protect allied interests in eastern Siberia. Press dispatches received in London say the British, French and Italian Ambassadors in Tokio have or will immediately ask the Japanese government to take whatever action it may consider necessary to oppose German propaganda in Siberia and protect the military store in Vladivostok.

Need Apparent.

It is believed in Washington that military activity by Japan is imminent. Need for Japanese action has been increased, it is felt, by the signing of peace by the Bolsheviks and the German invasion of Finland. Also came further reports of hostile attitude of Bolshevik element in Siberia, as well as of the thousands of released Austro-German war prisoners who have been armed and placed at a belated disposal from British and Russian forces are menacing the frontier of China and Turkistan. Turkish and German agencies have been active in this territory attempting to arouse the Mohammedans against the Chinese government.

German Domination.

Articles of treaty signed by Russia and the Central Powers do not go into detail, but German domination of the territory taken from Russia is assured. Article one provides that Germany and Austria shall be permitted to decide the fate of the territory "in agreement with their populations."

New Frontier.

The new Russian frontier from the Gulf of Finland into the Caspian sea is to be determined later but Russia is to evacuate Anapoli and surrender the provinces of Batum, Kars and Trabzon and remaining portions of an ancient Armenia to the Turks. This territory has a combined area of 20,000 square miles and a population of more than 1,600,000.

Roundups Next.

Berlin announces officially that Romania has accepted German armistice conditions. The peace negotiations which were interrupted last week by the signing of the previous armistice and it was necessary to agree to a new one before the pour parties could continue.

In The West.

Attacks of larger proportions than usual and intense artillery duels continue on the Western front but there has been no indication of a resumption of operations on a larger scale.

In the Verdun sector a French surprise attack on the Calonne trenches carried the attack forward 400 yards on a front of 1,200 yards to the German forced line. The French took 180 prisoners.

American artillery have shelled effectively an assembly of German troops in sector N.W. of Toul. The German artillery fire, however, has slackened considerably.

Treaty Pact.

Amsterdam, March 5.—Russia and the central powers in a peace treaty at Brest-Litovsk, agreed a war between them should be at an end, Berlin dispatches say.

The third clause of the treaty provides that the region west of a line agreed upon and which is to be eliminated later, formerly belonging to Russia, shall have no further obligation toward Russia and Germany and Austria will determine their fate in agreement with the population.

Article four provides evacuation of Anapoli province and surrender of Arava, Erzerum, Batum to Turkey. The treaty continues:

Article five: Russia will without delay carry out complete demobilization of her army, including forces newly raised by the present government. Russia will further transfer her warships to Russian harbors and leave them there until general peace or immediate dismemberment. Warships of states concluding in a state of war with the triple alliance will be treated as Russian warships in so far as they are in Russian control.

The barred zone in the object continues in force until the conclusion of peace. An immediate beginning will be made of the removal of mines in the Baltic and so far as possible in the Black Sea. Commerce shipping is free in these waters and will be resumed immediately.

Embassies Safe.

Stockholm, March 5.—Members of the British, French and Italian embassies left Petrograd last week now are at Helsingfors, according to information reaching the legation here. The Swedish government will be asked to use its good offices to effect a truce to carry diplomats to Tornio on the Swedish-Finnish border. Two hundred and fifty other embassies, including some American, are now at Abo on the western coast of Finland. They have been advised to return to their respective embassies or the Finnish government as Sweden will not likely send them to Abo.

In Shanghai.

London, March 5.—The Russian situation is completely absorbing the press and public. There have been frequent meetings of the Japanese cabinet at which doubtless the entire question was considered most carefully with the realization of the serious nature of the responsibility involved.

PEACE DISCUSSION ADVANCES MADE BY GERMAN CHANCELLOR

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

London, March 5.—In the view of the Marquis of Lansdowne expressed in a letter to the Daily Telegraph, the recent speech of Chancellor Von Hertling marked a perceptible advance in peace discussion.

Four points of Von Hertling's speech are selected by Lord Lansdowne for comments.

First is the chancellor's wish for an intimate meeting of the belligerents. Lord Lansdowne interprets this to mean a small, informal meeting not of plenipotentiaries but of persons authorized to discuss confidentially the probability of a formal convention. He referred approvingly to the opinion of Foreign Secretary Balfour that it would be unwise to begin negotiation unless some preliminary agreement exists and asks how such a preliminary agreement is to be reached without preliminary conversation.

The second point is Von Hertling's admission that peace can be discussed on the basis of President Wilson's four principles. To say Lord Lansdowne is satisfied as far as it goes but he maintains "That we are entitled to seruity in the manner in which these principles have been applied by Germany."

The third point is the chancellor's assurance that he would greatly rejoice and co-operate finding a political solution to the international arbitration. Lord Lansdowne says this statement may be welcomed and recalled that Mr. Balfour made a similar utterance.

The fourth point is Von Hertling's intimation that Germany does not intend of regaining Belgium together with the chancellor's reference to Table noted, add to the calculation of Belgium jumping off ground for German enemies. Lord Lansdowne points out that material passage in the paper note upon which Von Hertling relied insists that Germany evict.

SWITZERLAND CARES FOR MANY SOLDIERS

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Paris, March 5.—There were 24,136 invalided soldiers of warring nations interned in Switzerland on Oct. 31, 1917. Of these 12,767 were French, 1,822 Belgians, 964 English, 8,584 Germans, 228 Austrians and 142 Hungarians. These figures do not include 4,746 interred persons who were returned to their native countries in accordance with agreements concluded between combatants through an intermediary of Switzerland.

Lewis Denial.

Discussing reports of possible action by Japan in Siberia, Senator Davis of Illinois, democratic whip in the Senate today declared there was no agreement or understanding between the United States and Japan on the subject.

All Agreed.

Washington, March 5.—The United States now is in agreement with Japan, Great Britain and other combatants on the principle of action in Siberia but the details remain to be worked out. This became known today as the cabinet met with President Wilson to discuss the subject.

Washington, March 5.—The Evening News says the action of Japanese intervention in Siberia has been settled and all allies as well as the United States have agreed to immediate action to safeguard the interests of the powers.

WASHINGTON WILL GET MACHINE GUN

Machine Gun Captured When Germans Raid American Trenches Will Be Sent Here as First War Trophy.

With the American army in France, March 5.—A German machine gun in poor condition may be sent to Washington as the first American trophy. It was captured in the class of material dropped hastily by the Germans when he retired from his attack on the American line last week. The weapon with several belts of ammunition is now in possession of the intelligence officers.

The first Americans to win the new American medal for bravery in action probably will be men who participated in Friday's successful fight with Germans in the Toul sector.

Among them undoubtedly will be some, if not all, of those who were decorated yesterday by Premier Clemenceau. The fighting records of the various soldiers are being compiled and on these records recommendations will be made by the general commanding the division. The data given others carefully so as to make certain none will be honored specially for simply doing his duty.

The entire American expeditionary force is waiting to see who among them will be the first to get the new war medals.

KIDNEY TROUBLE NOT EASILY RECOGNIZED

Applicants for Insurance Often Rejected.

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview of the subject, made the astonishing statement that many men who are rejected for insurance are rejected because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease.

Judging from reports from drug stores who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kiltner's Swamp Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

We find that Swamp Root is strictly an herbal compound and we would advise our readers who feel in need of such a remedy to give it a trial. It is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kiltner & Co., Birmingham, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention the Janesville Daily Gazette.

FRIDAY IS LAST DAY FOR THE VOLUNTEERS

Men With Knowledge of Auto Engines Have Until Friday to Volunteer—Special Leaves Chicago Friday Night

Up to a little while this afternoon no registration had applied to the local board to enter the aviation section or to the signal corps to take up training immediately at Kellerville, San Antonio, Texas. A telegram received this morning by the local board from Adjutant General Hotway states that a special Pullman train will leave Chicago Friday night which will accommodate all of the men from this section who volunteer for service in this branch.

Three hundred men in Wisconsin with a practical knowledge of automobile engines are needed by General Pershing at once. It is an opportunity for men with this mechanical training to be able to enlist in the aviation section. Prospects are bright for almost immediate shipment to France. Only restriction is that the men shall be physically fit, and with tuberculosis and syphilis will be permitted to enter. If Wisconsin's quota is not filled by Friday, the necessary number will be induced into the service at once.

TELEPHONE COMPANIES HAVE PAID LICENSE MONEY

City Treasurer George W. Muench has sent to the county Treasurer $3,383.55 the amount of state taxes collected by the city. The city treasurer also reports that he has received the license money from the Rock county and the Wisconsin telephone companies. The Wisconsin telephone company paid $1,673.29 and the Rock county $377.81. These sums represent the per cent of eighty-five per cent of the net earnings of the companies.

PART ITALY PLAYS IN THE WORLD WAR IS GRAPHICALLY RELATED

The Lecture by Charles Upson Clark Most Enjoyable.—Pictures of Italy's Part in the War.

A vital message was contained in the address of Charles Upson Clark which was given before a large audience on last evening at the Myers Opera House. The two facts which he believes of supreme importance in this time were 1st, that Austria has invaded the border from that was the weakest in Europe, and that it was here that a decisive blow could be struck. 2nd, that Austria is very much afraid of America's advent into the war, and so far does not think that she means business.

"Austria," he said, "was very nearly tried, and the advent of even a small body of American troops to the battle-front in Italy might be of immense importance." The question was raised as to the disposition had been made by the Austrians, Senator Whitehead, who entertained him during his stay in the city. Dr. Clark was a personal friend of Philip Whitehead during the latter's residence in Rome.

Dr. Clark is a son of Kate Upson Clark and graduated from Yale some twenty years ago. After teaching Latin for a time in Yale, he went to Rome in charge of the Academy of Classical Research. He went to the battle front and is traveling at this time explaining the part of Italy in the war. During the afternoon Dr. Clark gave a short talk at an informal reception for ladies, held at the home of Mrs. A. C. Hough on South Main street. Dr. Clark explained how the assistance of the American officials aided in carrying the large number of caravans to the border.

Both sides displayed excellent ability in putting forth their arguments and showed a careful preparation of the subject. While Madison had probably a superior class of orators yet they were in the necessary evidence which is the deciding factor in any debate.

In upholding the affirmative side of the question, the Madison speakers referred to the great evil which is ever present in private ownership of railroads and that is "rate discrimination."

They cited facts and figures to prove that the railroads were now in operation in the United States. But the negative came back and cited how the Interstate Commerce commission, created by the federal government, was regulating these corrupt practices.

Cases were cited by the negative whereby the railroads had been compelled to pay an enormous amount on the legal discrimination and now with the ever increasing supervision by the government these railroads under private ownership were reaching a maximum of efficiency.

Comparisons were made of railroads in the United States under private ownership, and railroads of other countries that are owned by the government. In every case, without exception, it was found that the railroads of the United States are vastly superior, both in service and in rates. The financial side of the question was taken up and weighed by both sides and although the affirmative proved that the railroads were unable to stand up under the present war strain, was thrust upon them yet, according to the negative, the fact to note is that the traffic had been increased more than fifty per cent and that their capital and carrying facilities had remained stationary.

He also described the wonderful catalog of their secret service bureau wherein was listed every strategic point in the United States, together with the personal histories of every individual of importance in the national affairs.

Dr. Clark said that Italy saved the cause of the allies. First, when she declared neutrality, a large body of French troops which guarded the boundary were released and were hurried to the defense of Paris; and second, when she really declared war, her aid and resources seemed more than she had amply cause to go to war.

But Italy had been in war with the Turks at Tripoli since 1911, and had no wish to be further involved, unless absolutely necessary.

BARROW IS CAPABLE BASEBALL MANAGER

BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS.
New York, March 5.—Hub fans registered satisfaction when Ed Barrow signed to manage the Red Sox. The twentyninth world's champions were lost without a manager when Jack Barry's status in the navy was determined, and Harry Frazee was loath to land a man like Barrow to fill the managerial job.

Nine out of every ten baseball men will tell you that Ed Barrow is one of the most capable and sound men in the game. That's going some, for there are little chances in baseball, as well as in any other profession. But Barrow is the sort of a chap who offends no one, makes friends with a big majority of the people he meets and commands esteem because of his bearing and his personality.

Barrow is a plucky and a fighter, but he is methodical about it. He knows how to handle men, which is one of the most necessary assets to the successful baseball man. And he knows baseball.

True, the new Red Sox pilot has been out of the game as a manager for a number of years. He may find present-day tactics a bit different from the tactics of his day as he held his post, but he has the ability to adjust himself to conditions, and he pulled off a smart deal when he signed Johnny Evers.

With Evers as his first lieutenant, and his own experience and squareness of politics behind the Red Sox, the Hub aggregation is sure to be a factor in the American League race this year.

MORRIS MILLER

Fred Dyer, the English battler, was talking recently about accurate hitting, and said that Jim Driscoll once pointed out to him a quite unusual method of landing squarely on his opponent's jaw. Driscoll said that he has spent lots of time studying ways and means of reaching the jaw of his adversaries and everyone knows that Driscoll was one of the most accurate hitters the game has known. "If you want to be sure of landing right on the point of the other fellow's jaw," said Driscoll, according to Dyer, "aim directly at his right wrist." Dyer says that it sounded silly, of course, to him, but that when he thought it over he saw that the other fellow's jaw was always on the right line with his right hand. The idea also has the virtue that in shooting at a man's right wrist with a right-hand walloper a boxer's eyes do not show his intention of landing on the jaw. Driscoll declared that the other fellow is sure to believe that you are trying to find and drive for his body, so he tried the idea out in his last fight and that it worked for him with great success. He was fighting a tough bird in Australia and he found it hard to cross with a right-hand punch. He noticed his adversary's right wrist swaying before his jaw and when he aimed at the wrist he landed a harder, cleaner punch on the jaw than he had ever managed before.

"TIGHT" WAD IS SOME SECRET SERVICE SLEUTH!

It was not a desire to escape the national army draft that impelled Sterling Stryker, the Giants' young pitcher, to enlist in the navy recently, for the player is only 20 years of age. It is a real patriot and gave himself willingly to Uncle Sam in spite of the fact that he was regarded as a most promising hurler and one who had an amateur club bidding for his services. The lance star with a few years more of careful grooming. Stryker was pitching for a semi-professional team at Long Branch, N. J., in 1916, when he was discovered by Andy Coakley, former big league pitcher and at present coach of Columbus' baseball team. Stryker was signed out by McLean, Mo., last spring and formed to Rochester for needed experience. He was sent to Montreal by the Rochester club in midseason and rejoined the Giants in the fall.

When Barney Dreyfuss recently drew up a national league playing schedule he took care to make his home season at Forbes Field, Pittsburgh, shorter than in former years. The Pirates will not begin the pennant race there until April 25, and they will wind up their home schedule on Sept. 7. In order to shorten the campaign at Forbes Field, Dreyfuss engaged two double-league players Saturday with the Brooklyn and Cardinals, respectively. Perhaps the outlook for another tail-end ball club convinced Dreyfuss that Pittsburgh fans would be tired of the Pirates when the Labor day games were over.

Phil Chotinich, who was a member of the Brooklyn club in the old Federal League, is now assisting the athletic director at the Great Lakes station.

A LITTLE RED CROSS HELPER.

Our little busy working for
The soldier-men in France;
I mean to make them lots of things
Because I get a chance.

This made already one face-cloth,
And knitted it myself;

But I had used by mistake—
It was lying on the shelf.

And I started on a sweater—
I would have got it done,

But when Mother showed me her scarf
And then I started one.

It's brown, and very warm and nice,
I'm proud and can't be.

My mother came to see me,
And she finished it for me.

Two started wristlets and a cap,

Some more stockings too,

I think it's very interesting.

To start off things don't you?

This little poem tells a tale all its own.

It comes from the pen of Maud M. Hinkins and was published in the first edition of the St. Nicholas. There goes our number of little people in this country, right here at home in Rock County, who have the paper and are reporting and did their little part in the poem. They are helping more than they think. Their patriotic efforts are having their natural effect upon the nation as a whole, upon other children of foreign birth or parentage, and even though they do not always complete their "stint" they show the disposition to do something constructive.

The Junior Red Cross is designed for just such workers, but really the work that has already been accomplished by these little patriots is remarkable. Many a soldier or sailor has earned his wrists, or scarf, or sweater, kept by loving hands, and it is one of the parts in the war, these little people can do, if nothing else, the change their helpers into doing something constructively. This war will not be won by the actual fighters alone, but by those whom they have helped forward, everyone can play to their individual part.

SAVE THE AUDITORIUM.

No one really blames the stockholders of the Auditorium for deciding to sell the structure and get out from under a proposition that is a losing one, but, just the same, the demand for such a structure as the Auditorium is as great today as it was when the original project was launched several years ago. This Auditorium is advertised for sale on the 15th of the present month and doubtless will be sold unless something is done to stop it. It has been suggested that it might be leased to the local state school company for military purposes, that the city pay a part of the rent, the state the other part, the company the upkeep of the building. The tendency to the building, demanded by the state industrial commission, to be paid for by popular subscription.

The use of the Auditorium could be placed here manifold and will increase as the war goes on. Just as in the previous war days, huge barracks, agricultural displays, public meetings, sale of fine blooded stock, chicken shows, gatherings of various nature, can be held in this structure if it is available.

It is large enough to accommodate huge crowds and with very little expense can be made most comfortable winter or summer. The floor space is sufficient to admit a full sized militia company, and with a few interior partitions, proper toilet and other rooms essential to places of this nature would make a wonderful armory.

It is not an impossibility to accomplish this. Thus far Janesville has done nothing for its state guard companies, although many other cities have this been started, most liberal for the national guard companies. The service of the United States for the boys who have been summoned to the national army, but for those who remain bound, the men too old or too young for military service, the business, professional and the working men, it has not been asked to do anything. It is an essential matter to any community, as well as to the state at large, to have these state guard organizations. It is an insurance of public safety, an asset in the form of insurance against disturbances that arise in many districts during war times.

Many business men who are owners in the Auditorium stock list, would doubtless contribute something more toward meeting this increased improvement cost. They gave their du-nations originally to retain the building for public use and doubtless would add to their original investment if requested, knowing it would be maintained for public use. There is still time to take action, and the best way to do so is to take time by the forelock and not wait until it is too late.

YOUR SHARE IS FAIR.

Does not this caption hit you right between the eyes? Certainly it does.

You are an American citizen, you are proud of your nationality, you glory in your country and the men who make up your government. You are not one of the tattered, starving rabbis of Europe who creep and crawl right under and slaughter the innocent women and children at command of a Kaiser! You are an American citizen. When you are called upon by the various committees remember these facts and also remember the slogan, "Your share is fair."

LENROOT'S CHANCES.

From the republican point of view

no one should question Lenroot's candidacy for the United States senatorial nomination as anything but the right and proper action. He is loyal, and demonstrated it has voted right right. He has upheld the honor of the state in the lower house of congress and now the citizens of the state wish to have him further advanced.

A vote for Lenroot is a vote for a loyal American citizen whose integrity and honesty of purpose can not be questioned.

If Prof. Mason's idea of making the danger of the U-boats less, it will be one more plum in the cap of Wisconsin, for he is a Madison man, a graduate of the Madison schools, later of the university, and now has won honors for the state and nation by his "honest" school theory that promises to eliminate much of the danger of submarine attacks.

Life is certainly attractive to the German spies, if they don't get caught they will get all kinds of honors from the Kaiser, and if they do they will be interned at our nice winter resorts and every want carefully looked after.

Constructive, not destructive government, will always win. These are war days and there should be no scientific or internal discussion of ways or means. We must bury local politics in the one great national issue—"Win the war."

The fact that the men folks will sing, "Keep the Home Fires Burning," with tremendous enthusiasm doesn't prove that you can get them to go home and saw up some wood for those fires.

It's certain line to sing about
"Keeping the home fires burning," but how are the boys to know about them if you don't send them the Gazette to tell them the news in Rock County.

The Russians are the first people in the world to discover and announce the glorious truth that you can get your rights in this world by lying down and saying "Please kick me."

After a lot of newspapers go out of business and consolidate with other papers, the print paper producers will wonder what they gained by their exorbitant prices.

The Germans are still not worrying about the American army, as they have it straight from Kaiser Bill that we will only have wooden guns for two years.

It is difficult to heave many sad sighs in sympathy for the sufferings of the farmer who is getting nearly three times as much for his wheat as he used to.

It would appear as though the next move as regards the La Follette question is up to the United States Senate.
That is what the public demand now.

Some of the people who keep saying, "Wake Up, America," then go home and eat white bread three times every day.

Now all that is asked of the shipbuilders is to have a few strikeless days.

It is going to take some deep thinking to beat the submarines.

Also we must aim high to get the airplanes.

ROY K. MOULTON

OII! TROTZKY, WHERE ART
THOU?

When Leon Trotzky left New York
sudden sonic month back, to go to Petrograd and clean out the banks, he left a little furnished flat. He had bought the furniture on the installment plan. The well-known Jewish post Sholem Asch had gone shortly after him for the stuff. Now he has been found dead. He will have to pay $200 due on Trotzky's furniture. Trotzky should be worth several millions by this time. The incidents inspired the following poetic outburst:

"At times, as I rule here in Russia,
in the master of this and of that,
I wonder who paid the installments,
The regular monthly installments,
On the stuff that I bought for my fat?"

"Put IT in the czar's Winter Palace.
All Petrograd comes at my call.
They give me a hand on the Nevsky,
The populace cheers on the Nevsky,
Or how at Sts. Peter and Paul."

"I'll stand in the midst of the nations,
A figure for war or for peace,
And all will await my decision—
The voice of new Russia's decision—
And all opposition shall cease."

"That little brat had in the bedroom,
That elegant dining room set,
At the oddest of moments I wonder—
Rule all the Russ yet I wonder—
If any one's paid for 'em yet."

They gave a Chicago murderer a porterhouse steak and French fried potatoes just before hanging him, which, in our opinion, is a poor way
to conserve food.

Men are taking care of their automobiles these days. Most of them don't know where they will get an other.

The other day a man ran away with our neighbor's wife and his automobile at the same time.

Our neighbor came out of the basement just in time to see him driving away, and he yelled at the driver:

"Don't forget to send the car back!"

What has become of the old-fashioned knocker who used to beat about

We wonder if he knows his name,

We fancy every breeze above

Brings us a message of his love.

We never look into the sky

War Once Fought on Battlefields Exclusively, Now Waged Behind Lines--And Women Do Fighting

Thus is the first of a series of articles by Ethel Childe Dorr, one of the greatest reporters the war has developed, which will appear from time to time in the Gazette. Miss Dorr has witnessed the war scenes in the war in England and France, and her article also fresh viewpoint lithographs not presented. Editor.

By ETHEL CHILDE DORR.
London (by mail). Just before the opening of the meeting of the British drama writers here in France, but before they had seen those pieces in the other line, I wanted to know more than had been told us of actual conditions of life in the allied countries. It seemed to me vital that we should know the truth about England.

Had the English campaign, necessarily carried on for a year, brought her to the verge of starvation? Had the morale of the people deteriorated? What latent unrest in the Islands should incite a revolution? Was it possible that the American army might ultimately have to shoulder the burden, not only of Russian defeat but of British collapse as well?

All these questions have been raised by the United States press, as well as by the press of all the socialist and pacifist editors. In every English newspaper we have read, not once but often, that "capitalistic" England had duped the Americans into taking a task too great for exhausted Europe. That of beating the invincible Germans.

IN ONE OF THIRY PLANT,
15,000 WOMEN WORK

I went to see for myself, and I went to England. Since my arrival I have traveled in England as far north as Birmingham and Coventry. I have crossed the Scottish border and have seen something of the great industries of the Clyde. I have visited munition works, where men, women, and children, some of whom were maimed, mangled, and killing shells with death. I have seen several weeks in London. I have been in an air raid, and have seen German bombs hurtled out of a deep night sky. I heard Englishmen say the last word of the punishment as the battered planes took off, the chattering voices that were left over. After these weeks in England I feel easier about our men fighting except their own.

What I have been witnessing is just a great battle, the last battle behind the scenes of the German foe to break England's strength before the American army comes to help us up.

THREE IN LONDON BEHIND
LINES AS IN THE FIELD

Wars may once have been fought exclusively in the battlefield. Today they are fought in harvest fields and factories and in city streets as well. They are fought by women and men, as much as by men in arms. The passing of a woman suffrage measure, the breaking of iron and steel, the American House of representatives on the same day, what was that but an acknowledgement of these facts?

The British are a whole are fighting this battle behind the lines, as bravely as cheerfully, and as intrepidly as the British armies in the field. They have enemies in their ranks.

They base on Independent Labor, many of only 200 members, but it is a very independent socialist-pacifist group, and it is doing everything it can to ruin the entire labor movement with a pacifist spirit. So far it has not succeeded.

London is underground during the night, like Paddington station on a hot night in August.

Today, for the most part, is a foreigner population. The native English like their air raids differently. My first experience with the bombing depended on a rarely clear night and a quiet center. There was a blinding light of a thousand lights, and even a few faint stars. It was a little darker seven in the evening and the streets were full of people hurrying home from work.

GERMAN AIR RAIDS DO NOT DISTURB THEIR CALM

When the guns began to roar I put on my coat and hat and made at once for the subway. I was packed with hotel guests seeking the ground floor, but all floors were calm and unperurbed. I walked first through the lounge and drawing rooms to observe the effect of the heavy and increasing anti-aircraft gunfire. No effect at all.

The people were reading, writing or talking quietly as if no such thing as an enemy airplane existed. I never saw a less excited crowd of people. The few besides myself who appeared in the least interested in events were some young Canadian and New Zealand officers just arrived from France.

The barrage was intense, and brighter than the moon or stars was the bursting shrapnel against the gray sky. But brighter still were those sky sentinels, the searchlights, constantly sweeping the heavens, picking out the targets.

The gunfire came from every direction, occasionally a shell picked the air in our immediate neighborhood.

"Who-o-o? Who-o-o?" shrilled the shell, as it anxiously asking the way.

FIRING KEEPS UP FOR NEARLY TWO HOURS

"When it sounds like that it's too dangerous to stand outside," advised a nice Canadian boy with a captain's insignia on his sleeve. So the next time a shell rushed by with its irritated "Who-o-o? Who-o-o?" I decided went indoors for a few minutes.

The firing kept up for nearly two hours, and we distinctly saw two bombs drop in our corner of the town. In both cases the victims were near all women and children. The newspapers seldom reveal where the damage occurs, but it is a sad fact that worst havoc has been wrought in crowded neighborhoods, where many children swarm.

One of the most tragic of Christ mass parties was recently given in the largest department of an English Red Cross hospital, the guests being children, some of whom had been wounded, but more whose nerves had been wrecked by fright during the raids.

There were cases of epilepsy developed after bombs had fallen in narrow streets. Some children looked little better than idiots. One girl, eight years old, had four years ago taken up a constant low whining like a frightened animal.

"I never used to do that, Lydia," apologized the little big sister who held him in her arms. "But it's never stopped since the 'orrid noise blew our 'ouse down."

QUEEN ALEXANDRA
TO SEE CHRISTMAS TREE

There was a big Christmas tree with lights and presents and everything the world over, and Queen Alexandra came to see it all, and for the moment most of the children were excited and happy. In time some of them will forget their terror, but few, I was told, are likely to grow up normally robust men and women.

These babies, and sometimes their mothers, are the saddest casualties of the war while England is fighting behind the lines.

It may not be entirely clear why Germany deems the murder of women and children a military advantage, but the fact is that the air raids have a real purpose. No matter where the bombs fall, whether on Buckingham Palace or East End果樹園, they oblige the English to keep their heads down, and if they do, they oblige the English to keep their heads down, and if they do,

"I'm afraid of me pulling in the tarpon. The fish pulled our boat in to the shore, where it was an easy matter for us to jump to terra cotta, donchaknow."

And the Colonel, looking around and seeing nothing but empty chairs, adjusted his eyeglasses and said,

"Home, Jimmie."

BRITISH MUDDLE SOME, BUT HANG TOGETHER

The German towns have been bombed in order to keep a number of German planes and fliers away from the battle line. If the English diversify their lights enough, if they can simultaneously bombard towns in different directions, it forces the Germans to keep a small army of home defenders away from the front.

The submarine policy of Germany is akin to that of the aeroplane policy. If the Germans are as wise as they claim to be, they must know by this time that England cannot be starved by bombing blockade.

Now, in doing everything possible to divide and subdivide the coalition of nations against her. She has completely succeeded in dividing the eastern from the western nations. This is as far as she can go in the division of allied countries apparently. The next best thing is dividing fighting forces.

Best of all, from the German point of view, is dividing the people of a nation setting class against class, brother against brother. German diplomacy is working overtime on that job, even in England.

Nevertheless the British are hanging together. They are muddling some things. They always do; but don't overlook the fact that they always muddle through. I have often wondered why the British had to muddle at all, and now I think I begin to understand why.

The Daily Novelette

IN TERRIBLE SEAS.

"While we are talking of shipwrecks," interrupted Colonel Harta Beeston, although the members of the Necktie to Nature Club were discussing "Folding Beds and Their Manfold Uses," one day, he was sailing off the coast of Barbados, about the Spanish Main. I was looking through the Captain's telescope and if there wasn't a cyclone coming up over the horizon, bah Joe!

"Well, the bloom'in' thing came a mile a second and carried everything before it. First our topmast went, then the middle mast, then the bottom-most, the pilot house, upper and lower decks were washed away. The only thing that was left was the bally flagpole."

After the storm had somewhat subsided, er—we floundered around helplessly in the choppy seas. Every man aboard was quaking with fear. We had no way of getting to shore.

Just then I happened to see a tarpon, the largest catch ever taken in my life, and it was then a large idea. I asked the Captain's wife, who was knitting a muffler for her cousin, who was serving in India, to let me have her ball of yarn. She did and I threw the bally ball ovahboard. The tarpon made a dive for it and swallowed it whole, where it got entangled in the mouth's epiglottis and largely closed it.

"I'm afraid of me pulling in the tarpon. The fish pulled our boat in to the shore, where it was an easy matter for us to jump to terra cotta, donchaknow."

And the Colonel, looking around and seeing nothing but empty chairs, adjusted his eyeglasses and said,

SPLENDIDLY DELINEATED CHARACTERS IN "THE WHIP"

One of the delights of "The Whip," which will be seen at Meyer's, Saturday and Sunday, is the splendid delineation given to the characters in this, the world's biggest motion picture, by the actors who play the leading parts and also by those who play the smaller parts. Each character has been splendidly cast. There is not a poor actor in the whole company. So perfect is the acting that the spectator forgets he is looking at a drama. The spectator forgets everything except that here he is seeing life—true life to the brim, with excitement and interest.

Heart and Home ProblemsBY ELIZABETH THOMPSON
LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO MRS. THOMPSON, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

Mrs. Thompson: I am a young girl of eighteen and there is a young man of nineteen of whom I think a great deal. I became acquainted with this young man through my girl friend's fiance, as he was employed by the young man at the time. My girl friend and I used to go and visit her fiance once in a while at his work, so that this young man had seen me a few times and I told my friend's fiance that he liked my actions very much and would give the world to go with me.

At one time we had a chance for an introduction and he seemed a very pleasant young man. We made a date to go machine riding and the other couple went also. I am a rather bashful girl and during the ride I did not talk very much. My girl friend is rather talkative and she did most of the talking. Since that evening he has seemed to lose all interest in me. Sometimes he will speak and others not. I would like very much to keep his friendship, as he is a respectable boy and is greatly liked by all who know him.

1) The wedding gown she depends upon the bride can afford the money she expects to spend on her trousseau is limited she should get a pretty but practical wedding gown which she can wear on dress occasions after her wedding. I would advise a dress of white, because it is almost always worn by brides and is really most fitting because of its purity.

2) I, too, think you are too young to assume the responsibilities of marriage.

3) It is not necessary for anyone to attend your girl friends. It is customary for the groom's closest friend to be his best man. If I chose to have your girl friend's name it would be all right.

Flour should be kept in a cool dry place. A tablespoon of melted butter is measured after melting.

All articles to be fried should be flour and pepper bread crumbs until thick enough to shape into cakes.

Corn Cakes—One-half cup canned or prepared corn, one-half teaspoon butter, one-half teaspoon sugar. Add salt and pepper bread crumbs until the mixture is thick enough to shape into cakes. Cook soft.

Mash through colander. Cream butter substitute with flour, add milk or water, thinning to desired consistency. Season to taste. A good example of combining the starch and protein of potatoes and beans.

two cups graham flour, two cups whole wheat sugar or less, one tea-spoonful soda, one tea-spoonful yeast, one cup milk, one cup raisins, two eggs, two cups flour, two cups ingredients, add molasses, milk, raisins last, and bake forty-five minutes in moderate oven. Makes good sized loaf.

A rocking chair will move about all over the room until it finds a squeaky board in the floor, and there it will stay, immovable as the neighbor who keeps a pig.

SWEATING—MILIA

Sweat eruption, or milia, is a common result of violent exercise, whether from underclothing, sweat baths or hot fermentations.

It consists of a short-lived eruption of minute pin-point vesicles, each containing a droplet of sweat, following a brief period of itching.

The usual situation is the neck and chest, although the abdomen, flanks, back and limbs may be involved. The condition might be considered a mild prickly heat.

When I complain. (E. S. L.)

Answer—At the very beginning, if you will get the place perfectly dry and keep it protected with collodion, the sore will not get very bad. Another good local application is repeated painting with compound tincture of benzoin over the dry lesion several times a day. After the herpes has reached its height the best application is freshly made zinc oxide ointment.

There Is No Grip Germ

Is the grip germ carried in books or magazines? (L. W.)

Answer—"Grip" is a blanket title for various respiratory infections.

There is no specific grip germ.

There is no evidence that any disease is ever conveyed by books or magazines, provided they are not visibly soiled.

The trouble lasted about two months. After using one cake of Cuticura Soap with one box of Ointment she was healed." (Signed) Geo. Collinson, 306 W. Winfield St., Morrison, Ill., August 8, 1917.

These women have conducted a whirlwind campaign of education preparatory to today's ballot. Not a campaign for any particular candidate, but one to make certain that the women do their sex and themselves proud by turning out a whooping vote and downing forever the anti-suffrage spectre that the ladies do not care for the burden of the franchise here, simply as women should seek and gain political office. Not only but equally, and certainly should be qualifications for office. We do not advise women to run for office, but urge them to go slowly, to choose after deliberation women who will be a credit to our sex. The Woman Suffrage party is not backing any woman for office. As individuals you may do as your conscience dictates."

"I believe that if a woman is fitted by character and training for a certain position she has as much right to aspire to it as a man has. We all believe this, but we do not believe that just because woman has been franchised here, simply as women should seek and gain political office. Not only but equally, and certainly should be qualifications for office. Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a young girl of eighteen and there is a young man of nineteen of whom I think a great deal. I became acquainted with this young man through my girl friend's fiance, as he was employed by the young man at the time. My girl friend and I used to go and visit her fiance once in a while at his work, so that this young man has agreed to go to France? Are the schools free?

Business schools have training courses preparatory to government positions, but those schools usually charge the regular rate for their courses. Most of the larger high schools also have courses in French for those who wish to prepare themselves for foreign service, and these courses are usually free although in some cases a nominal fee is charged. In selecting for foreign service preference is given to those who have a speaking knowledge of French or some other foreign language.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a young girl of seventeen and am considered very good looking. I expect to be married this coming May. What kind of a wedding gown would you prefer?

(2) My cousin thinks I am entirely too young to get married but my father and mother do not object, as they have given me their consent. We are sure we love each other, as we have been keeping company long enough to prove it. He is an electrician and makes very good money, so that I know we could get along very comfortably. What is your advice?

LONG LIVE THE KING

The palace mourned and the pauper rejoiced. Haeckel had told what he knew and the leaders of the terrorists were in prison. Some in high places would be hanged with a silken cord, as was their due. And others would be ethnically disposed of. The way was not yet clear ahead, but the crisis was passed and safely.

"For what?" said Hedwig coolly.

"For loving you so." This was much better, quite strategic, indeed. A trench gained!

"Do you really love me? I wonder."

But Nikky was tired of words, and rather afraid of them. They were not his weapons. He trusted more, as has been said somewhere else, in his two strong arms.

"Too much ever to let you go," he said. Which means nothing unless we take it for granted that she was in his arms. And she was, indeed.

"Otto!" they cried. And again, "Otto."

The little king had turned quite pale with excitement.

Late in the evening, soon after he had appeared on the balcony, the court had sworn fealty to Otto the Ninth. He had stood on the dais in the throne room, very much washed and brushed by that time, and the ceremony had taken place. Such a shout from reverberating throats as went up, such a clatter as swords were drawn from scabbards and held upright in the air.

"Kling Otto!" they cried. And again, "Otto."

The king having been examined and given some digestive tablets by the court physicians—a group which, strangely enough, did not include Doctor Wiederman—had been given a warm bath and put to bed.

There was much formality as to the process now, several gentlemen clinging to their hereditary right to hang around and be nuisances during the ceremony. But at last he was left alone with Oskar.

Alone, of course, as much as a king is ever alone, which, with what extra sentries and so on, is not exactly solitary confinement.

"Oskar!" said the king from his pillow.

"Majesty!"

Oskar was gathering the royal garments, which the physicians had ordered burned, in case of germs.

"Did you ever eat American ice cream?"

"No, majesty. Not that I recall."

"It is very delicious," observed the king, and settled down in his sheets. He yawned, then set up suddenly—

"Otak!"

"Yes, majesty!"

"There is something in my trousers pocket. I almost forgot it. Please bring them here."

Slitting up in bed, and under Oskar's disapproving eye, because he, too, was infected with the germ idea, King Otto the Ninth felt around in his small pockets, until at last he had found what he wanted.

"I have a small box anywhere, a very small box?" he inquired.

"The one in which your majesty's seal ring came is here. Also there is one in the study which contained crayons."

"I'll have the ring box," said his majesty.

And soon the Lincoln penny rested on a cushion of white velvet, on which were the royal arms.

King Otto looked carefully at the penny and then closed the lid.

"Whenever I am disagreeable, Oskar," he said, "or don't care to study, or—or do things that you think my grandfather would not have done, I wish you'd bring me this box. You'd better keep it near you."

He lay back and yawned again.

* * * * *

Quite to the end now, with the countess not in her rooms or anywhere in the palace. With the bonfires burned to cold ashes, and the streets deserted. With the police making careful search for certain men whose names Haeckel had given, and tearing frezzed placards from the walls. With Miss Bruthwaite still lying in her drugged sleep, watched over by the sisters who had cared for the dead king, and with Karl, across the mountains, dreaming of a bride who would never be his.

Quite to the end. Only a word or two now, and we may leave the little king to fulfill his splendid destiny. Not a quiet life, we may be certain. Perhaps not a very peaceful or untroubled one. But a brave and steadfast and honorable one, be sure of that.

What should we gain by following Olga Loschek, eating her heart out in England, of the committee of ten, cowering in its cells? They had failed, as the wicked, sooner or later, must fall. Or Karl, growing fat in a prosperous land, alike greedy for conquest and too indolent for battle?

To finish the day, then, and close with midnight.

Nikky first, a subdued and rather battered Nikky. He was possessed by a desire, not indeed unknown to lovers, to revisit the place where he and Hedwig had met before. The roof—no less. Not even then that he hoped for himself any more than he had hoped before. But at least it could not be Karl.

Strangely enough, Hedwig also had had a fancy to visit the roof. She could not sleep.

So she had dismissed her maid and gone through Hubert's rooms to the roof. Nikky found her there.

Hedwig did not turn her head. She knew his steps, had really known he must come, since she was calling him, actually calling, with all her determined young will. Oh, she was shameless!

But now that he had come, it was Nikky who implored, and Hedwig who held off.

"My only thought in all the world," he said. "Can you ever forgive me?" This was tactless. No lover should ever remind his lady that he has withheld her.

"For what?" said Hedwig coolly.

"For loving you so." This was much better, quite strategic, indeed. A trench gained!

"Do you really love me? I wonder."

But Nikky was tired of words, and rather afraid of them. They were not his weapons. He trusted more, as has been said somewhere else, in his two strong arms.

"Did you ever hear of Abraham Lincoln, Oskar?" he asked.

"I—I have heard the name, majesty," Oskar ventured cautiously.

"My grandfather thought he was a great man." His voice trailed off, "I—should like—"

The excitements and sorrows of the day left him gently. He stretched his small limbs luxuriously, and half turned upon his face. Oskar, who hated disorder, drew the covering in stiff and geometrical exactness across his small figure, and tiptoed out of the room.

Some time after midnight the chancellor passed the guard and came into the room. There, standing by the bed, he prayed a soldier's prayer, and into it went all his hopes for his country, his grief for his dead comrade and sovereign, his loyalty to his new king.

King Otto, who was, for all the digestive tablets, not sleeping well, roused and saw him there, and sat upright at once.

"Is it morning?" he asked, blinking. "No, majesty. Lie down and sleep again."

"Would you mind sitting down for a little while? That is, if you are not sleepy."

"I am not sleepy," said the chancellor, and drew up a great chair. "If I stay, will you try to sleep?"

"Do you mind if I talk a little? It may make me drowsy."

"Talk if you like, majesty," said the old man.

King Otto eyed him gravely.

"Would you mind if I got on your knee?" he asked, almost timidly. In all his life no one had so held him, and yet Bobby, that very evening, had climbed on his father's knee as though it was very generally done. "I would like to try how it feels."

"Come, then," said the chancellor.

The king climbed out of bed and up on his lap. His chancellor reached over and dragged a blanket from the bed.
